

September 11, 1949.

Dr. Gilbert M. Smith,
Department of Biology,
Stanford University,
California.

Dear Professor Smith:

We enjoyed very much seeing you at the Symposium here, and especially your enthusiastic account of the proper behavior of Chlamydomonas reinhardtii. If, at your convenience, you could send cultures of the two mating types, and the mimeographed directions that we discussed, I would appreciate it very much.

Under separate cover, I am sending some recent publications, and hope that you can do me the favor of placing my name on your mailing list for any future papers of genetical interest.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

Joshua Lederberg,
Assistant Professor of Genetics.